

ABSTRACT

An unlocking mechanism adopted for use on retention module holder, which have a fastening stand and a locking member pivotally engaged with the fastening stand in a turn able manner. The fastening stand is for holding radiators. The locking member may 5 be located at a latched position and a release position for latching and separating from the radiators respectively under the control of the unlocking mechanism.